WILSON'S PLEA FOR CURRENCY REFORM

President In Person Addresses Congress, Urging Passage of Administration Bill.

PROVIDES REGIONAL BANKS

WASHINGTON, June 23.—In the presence of the two Houses of Congress, assembled in the Hall of Representatives, message on currency this afternoon. He vigorously advocated the prompt enactment of the administration measure for the establishment of a regional banking system, speaking "as the head of the government and the responsible leader of the party in power."

The President reached the Capitol at 12:35 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber, consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Secretary McAdoo, who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House today. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, the latter her private secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery. The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in his delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice-President Marshall. Both the galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded the reading of the message.

The President said:

The President's Address.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, Gentlemen of the Congress:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committees

REV. FREDERICK WILMOT, new minister of West Somerville Third Universalist Church, who will require health certificates at marriages.

The Rev. Frederick A. Wilmot, who after a year on the stage has been ordained minister of the West Somerville Third Universalist Church, will receive "clean bills of health" from couples coming to him to be married.

He made this announcement today in discussing his plans for his church work. "I thoroughly believe in eugenic marriages," he declared. "I believe society has a right to require health in candidates for matrimony."

The actor-pastor outlined his ideas and ideals in the following sentences:

1—The church needs ministers who can get into men's hearts.

2—The church needs a new sort of ministers—different from the cold-boned kind who acted as a gag—stopped the mouths of every one they met, by their forbidding and sanctimonious demeanor.

3—The minister needs time to think—and should not waste his days canvassing from house to house like a book agent.

He added:

"There comes a time in every man's experience when he becomes faded with the theories of life and longs for the realities. After leaving divinity school I felt that I had imbibed too freely of the scholastic spirit, and I felt impelled to go into a sphere where I would get closer to people as they are. That I chose the stage for a time as a part of my education was merely an incident.

"I took my stand last night for a life of service and I feel that my stage experience has only brought me closer to men. The trouble with the average minister is that he is too aloof from the hearts of men and therefore, he does not understand them so as to meet their spiritual needs.

"President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard, last week sounded the true note—that ministers need to get near to men. I feel that my stage experience is a preparation that will help to make my ministry successful."

500 of Sturtevant Workers Find Work

More than 500 of the 1,500 men and women who struck at the Becker Milling Machine and the Sturtevant Blower Works plants in Hyde Park a month ago today have secured work elsewhere, it was reported at a meeting of the strikers in French's Opera House, Hyde Park, this afternoon. The strikers denied there was any dissension in their ranks. They further said that those still out were being given substantial strike benefits.

Hurled to Death in Roxbury Crash

City Employe Crushed; Motorman Is Held.

One man was instantly killed and two others were injured today when an Elevated welding truck struck a Boston public works department wagon on Washington street, near Bussey's farm, in Forest Hills.

The dead man is James Black of No. 60 Yeoman street, Roxbury. The two men injured, Daniel Brady of No. 512 Hyde Park avenue, Roslindale, and Owen McDermott, of No. 384 Amory street, Jamaica Plain, were taken to the City Hospital.

The three men were riding with two others on the city team, going towards Roslindale. The truck, which is equipped with a trolley and a machine for welding rails together, was moving in the same direction. According to the Elevated officials, the team cut across the tracks in front of the truck.

In the collision three of the five men on the wagon were hurled to the ground. Black falling under the forward end of the truck. He was crushed to death under the wheels.

Motorman Frederick C. Stockwell, fifty-one, living at No. 3 E Wood avenue, Stoneham, went to the West Roxbury Station and gave himself up to the police, where he was held in $5,000 on the charge of manslaughter. He will appear in the district court tomorrow.

Fingerless, but a Skilful Pickpocket

Duffy an A No. 1 Thief, as Mawrus Would Say.

All this talk about "light fingered gentry" doesn't apply to William Duffy. For he hasn't a finger to his hands, and yet is one of the most skilful pickpockets in Boston.

He has his two thumbs, but the fingers are gone. When he was brought before Judge Burke today, charged with picking pockets, the court gasped. Albert H. Wheaton of Waltham said he caught Duffy stealing his watch. They fought, and Patrolman Elmer Jones arrested Duffy. Duffy is forty, and told the finger print experts at headquarters that his fingers were so battered up playing baseball in the days before gloves that he had his fingers amputated.

He was sent to the House of Correction for three months, after the discovery that he had been sentenced to thirty days on April 16. Court officers wonder what he would have done if he had had fingers.

Brayton Is Given Two Years in Prison

Restitution Does Not Save Brockton Postal Official.

Judge Morton of the United States District Court today sentenced Robert E. Brayton, former assistant postmaster at Brockton, to two years in Charlestown State Prison for embezzling about $2,300 of postal funds.

Through friends of Brayton, complete restitution had been made to the government. Judge Morton stated that Brayton, being in a government position in charge of surbordinates, was guilty of a more serious offense than if simply a lower employe, and that a fine alone in his case would not meet the ends of justice, especially where there were so many young men employed as in the postal service.

A Brockton business man had made arrangements to place Brayton in charge of the financial end of his business in case the court had seen fit to let Brayton off with a fine.

Both Arms Broken as Ladder Slips

Joseph Robinson, thirty-two, of No. 306 Shawmut avenue, is at the Relief Hospital with both arms broken, multiple injuries to his body and possible internal injuries, as the result of a thirty-foot fall while placing a sign on the third story of a building at No. 91 Portland street. The ladder upon which Robinson was working slipped. Robinson is employed by M. F. Place, a sign painter of Cornhill.

Year for Malden Thefts from Mail

Charles J. Lynn, former letter carrier at Malden, who was missing for several months, thereby causing his friends to search for his body on Middlesex Falls, was today sentenced to a year and a day in the Greenfield Jail for the stealing of letters containing money.

DERLEY TELLS OF JOY RIDE

FOSS ACTS IN SPEED MANIA

Daniel Herbert Derley, one of the three young men who took a joy ride in a stolen automobile on the South Shore, resulting in the death of Alton H. Tripp and the wrecking of the machine, today confessed to the part he played in the affair and was arrested on suspicion at the Quincy Hospital, where he is recovering from his injuries.

Although Derley frankly admitted that he was one of the "joy riders," he refused to disclose the identity of the third member of the party other than to say he belongs in Brockton. Derley said Tripp, the dead youth, was the one who suggested "taking a ride" and that Tripp drove the car, which was later found to be the property of William Pettis of North Abington. The car was from a garage at Nantasket.

Governor Calls Halt.

Following the accident in which Tripp was killed, Governor Foss today declared that at speed-crazed motorists should be given the severest sentences under the law. The State Highway Commission today started an investigation into the accident and asks into an automobile accident on the Nahant shore road in which three women and two men were hurt.

Young Derley's story of the night adventure which ended so disastrously was told in a ward of the Quincy Hospital this afternoon while nurses and policemen surrounded his cot. The young man's head was packed in ice and his face and chin bore marks of the impact.

At the conclusion of his narrative Captain Daniel R. McKay of the Quincy police told Derley he was under arrest. No charge was made. He was merely held on suspicion until he gets strong enough to leave the hospital when he will be locked up or released on bail.

"I don't want to commit any dead man," said Derley with emphasis. "That's why I don't want to put poor Alton Tripp in jail. Alton lived in Wollaston. My home is at No. 33 Hunt street, Brockton. My father is Daniel Derley. I wish somebody would send for him and tell him about this case.

"I have been lodging for four months at the home of Mrs. Knox Higgins, No. 2 Old Colony avenue, Wollaston. I have been working as a carpenter for my uncle, F. S. Bogden, in Wollaston.

Withholds Friend's Name.

"I left home Sunday afternoon between 2 and 3 o'clock and met Tripp. We went to Nantasket together. There by appointment I met a friend of mine from Brockton, a young fellow my age. I am twenty-three years old. I can't tell you who he was yet. I don't want to get anybody in bad, or to blame anyone. I don't want to convict any dead man either.

"I didn't know poor Alton Tripp was dead until they told me here in the hospital this morning. Things were all mixed up. Well, as I said, we went around the beach and had a good time. The three of us drank in the Palm Garden and other places, but I was the drunkest.

"In passing the parking space outside Paragon Park about 11 o'clock at night, Tripp said, 'Let's take a ride in this machine.' He pointed to a touring car that we were passing. Before that we had been to the fire at the garage which caused a lot of excitement.

Smallpox Outbreak in Lowell Asylum

LOWELL, June 23.—Five new cases of smallpox were discovered here today in the French Orphan Asylum on Pawtucket street, making fifteen cases in the city. About 250 children are sheltered in the asylum and all of these will be vaccinated today. A celebration was held in the institution yesterday to which the public was invited. Those first children taken ill circulated among the guests and all over the building. The other ten cases are isolated in the City Contagious Hospital. They are all adults.

MRS. JAMES F. CURTIS, one of Washington's devotees of the newest dance, the "Luncheon Lurch."

COPYRIGHT BY HARRIS & EWING STUDIO.

"Luncheon Lurch" the Newest Dance

Boston Awaits Vacation of Tango That Captivated Capital.

Boston society is getting ready to welcome the "Luncheon Lurch," the newest dancing craze, following the news in a dispatch from Washington today that the "Lurch" has already been tried out by Mrs. "Jimmie" Curtis, bride of the Back Bay clubman and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

According to the dispatch, everybody that's anybody in the social Who's Who in Washington has learned the "Lurch." It is said to be more alluring than any step yet seen on the Washington ballroom floors.

To be properly danced, the "Lurch" must be indulged in before luncheon. Hence comes the edible part of the name of the new dance which is a variation of the tango and the turkey trot. So hard has the dance hit Washington that it is to be seen in the hotel corridors and now the fashionable way to go into the dining room is to "Luncheon Lurch" to the tables. The idea is that every step taken by the dancers should bring them one step nearer the table, so the dance thus answers two purposes—the desire to dance and locomotion towards food.

Among the society women who are numbered among the "Lurchers" are not only Mrs. Curtis, but Miss Katherine Elkins, Misses Dorothy and Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton and Miss Margarette Barbour.

Mrs. Curtis is the bride of James Freeman Curtis of No. 28 Mt. Vernon street and member of the Tavern, Harvard, Country, Boston, Tennis and Racquet, New York Harvard, Metropolitan and Washington Chevy Chase clubs. He graduated from Harvard in 1899.

Mrs. Curtis before her marriage was Miss Laura Merriam, who lifted former Congressman Tarrow M. Catlin of Missouri and followed this with the announcement of her engagement to the Back Bay clubman.

British Want Old Washington Home

LONDON, June 23.—The British committee has issued an appeal to the public for subscriptions of $250,000 for the purchase of Sulgrave Manor, Northamptonshire, the ancestral home of Washington.

It is proposed to use part of the money in connection with the celebration of one hundred years' peace.

Surgeons Use Rib Bone to Mend Nose

PRESIDENT DEFENDS M'REYNOLDS' COURSE IN FRISCO SCANDAL

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Kahn of California today introduced two resolutions calling for all the correspondence and papers in the case that led up to the resignation of District Attorney McNabb.

CALLS FOR PAPERS IN THE CASE.

One resolution calls upon Attorney-General McReynolds to transmit to the House all papers on file in the office of the Attorney-General or referred by the President to the Attorney-General relating to the prosecution of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti.

The other calls for the same papers in the case of the prosecution of the Western Fuel Company.

A resolution introduced in the House today by Representative Hinebaugh of Illinois calls for an investigation by the Judiciary Committee of the resignation of United States District Attorney McNabb of San Francisco.

Wilson Defends McReynolds.

President Wilson today defended Attorney McReynolds' postponement of the Caminetti case until the Fall as "The only humane thing to do."

The President said that it was impossible for Immigration Commissioner Caminetti to visit California until the Fall and therefore he considered that Attorney-General McReynolds was entirely within his rights in requesting a postponement of the case after the matter had been laid before him by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

President Wilson also said that he had had no knowledge of the matter prior to yesterday's newspaper reports, but that he had directed the Attorney General to lay before him a complete report of the entire matter.

Apparently appreciating the political significance of the McNab charges, Secretary of State Bryan today conferred with Attorney General McReynolds at the Department of Justice.

They were closeted for some time and Assistant Attorney General Hare was summoned with the files in the case of the Western Fuel Company, one of the cases mentioned by McNab in his allegations of interference with justice.

Hands Tied, Says McNab.

McNab in a personal telegram to President Wilson, charged that orders from Attorney General McReynolds had tied his hands in the prosecution of two "white slavers" against whom the whole State has risen in indignation.

Attorney General McReynolds had refused to answer the charge directly, and this mystified government circles until a statement from the White House gave the first inkling of McReynolds' defense, and showed the President was supporting him.

McNab has offered his resignation.

'DID MY DUTY,' SAYS MILLER, SHEA'S SLAYER

Patrolman Charles W. Miller today said he only did his duty in shooting to death Ralph F. Shea, a South End boy, on Warrenton street, early Sunday Hill day.

A reporter found Patrolman Miller weeping out the stable at the LaGrange street station, where he is driving a patrol wagon after having been removed from his regular Warrenton street beat. Miller refused to discuss his case, but did say:

"I did my duty as I saw it. I have nothing to fear. My conscience does not trouble me."

Miller and his counsel, Michael J. Sughrue, refused to make any definite statement as to Miller's defense, but indicated that they would rely on the clause in the police manual which justifies shooting when an attempt is made to rescue a prisoner.

This clause reads as follows:

The discharge of a revolver to aid in the arrest, or to stop the flight, of a person who has committed only a misdemeanor is forbidden, but when such person becomes a dangerous assailant, or when an attempt is made to rescue, by violence, a prisoner of any grade even though guilty of no more than a misdemeanor, the situation changes instantly; the policeman must meet force with force, and the use of his revolver as a last means of protecting himself and upholding the law will be approved by the department.

It is said at headquarters that the real story of the shooting has not been told.

David J. Collins, who was sentenced to eight months for assault and battery upon Patrolman Miller, is to be brought on a writ of habeas corpus to testify at the trial.

STATE BOARD TO INVESTIGATE B. & M. RATES

The Massachusetts Railroad Commission announced today that it would investigate the advance in passenger rates which went into effect today on the Boston & Maine system.

The increases affect points north of Somerville and boost the price of commuters' tickets from one to four cents so as to make the price distribute by five and nine eliminate pennies.

Under the present statute the commission has no mandatory power. It must wait until a new schedule of fares is put into effect and then has power to act on its own initiative or on complaints to determine the cause and justice for an advance. The commission is now ready to hear the grievances of any commuters as the result of today's jump in fares. It wants to know what the riding public thinks about the increase.

The most conspicuous changes which were inaugurated with the Summer schedule are at Somerville Junction, where the fare has jumped from six cents to ten cents; Tufts College, from eight to ten cents; Waverly, twelve to fifteen cents; Waltham, seventeen to twenty cents; Bellmont, sixteen to fifteen cents; Wayland, thirty-one to thirty-five cents, etc.

In longer runs, too, the railroad management has taxed the passenger's purse in order, as it says, to simplify change and bookkeeping. The fare to Belchertown has jumped from $1.81 to $1.85; Northampton, $2.25 to $2.25; Amherst, $2.60 to $2.70—all of which means thousands of more dollars in railroad receipts at the expense of patrons for the same service.

PRESIDENT WILSON IN PERSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR CURRENCY REFORM

tion and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue. There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, carefully considered. It is for us to determine how whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it can not be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are at once at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

Must Vitalize Credit.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not merely to remove rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice. We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Emancipation Is Near.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit corporate and individual, and its originative brains. What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it? If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, and to have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and need for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issues exactly as at present.

Nation's Duty Is Clear.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question. We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—seen it more clearly now than it ever saw it before—much more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings. Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses. And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

The committees of the Congress to which legislation of this character is referred have devoted careful and dispassionate study to the means of accomplishing these objects. They have honored me by consulting me. They are ready to suggest action. I have come to you, as the head of the government and the responsible leader of the party in power, to urge action now, while there is time to serve the country deliberately and as we should, in the clear air of common counsel. I appeal to you with a deep conviction of duty. I believe that you share this conviction. I therefore appeal to you with confidence. I am at your service, without reserve, to play my part in any way you may call upon me to play it in this great enterprise of exigent reform which it will dignify and distinguish us to perform and discredit us to neglect.

"NO COMPROMISE ON CURRENCY PLAN," DECLARES WILSON

WASHINGTON, June 23.—There will be no compromise on the principles embodied in the currency bill to be presented to Congress today. There may be some changes in the details of the bill, but the principles must stand.

In these emphatic words President Wilson today informed the Washington "newspaper cabal" that he will countenance no attempt to change any of the vital parts of the currency measure. The President indicated clearly that the underlying principles of the bill have been carefully gone over and that he will veto any bill which is not based on the same general line as the current measure.

Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made public a digest of the administration's currency reform bill, which he introduced in the House today.

By the terms of this measure, the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency upon application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a government board entirely. There will be no refinement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing two per cent United States bonds

Representative Glass in his digest says:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comprehensive revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business."

Mondragon Sails a Political Exile

MEXICO CITY, June 23.—Ex-Minister of War Mondragon, who was forced out of office by President Huerta, left the capital today for Vera Cruz, enroute for Belgium. Although every possible honor marked his departure, including an honorary guard of fifty soldiers, it was reported that he goes abroad a political exile.

DON'T

Look at the Thermometer

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The last word in hot weather "don'ts" was issued in brief form today by Dr. Carl Alsberg, chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry. Dr. Alsberg, it develops, would abolish the thermometer because of its dispiriting influence on the minds of perspiring men and women. Here are his "don'ts":

Don't eat to excess.

Don't wear too many clothes.

Don't drink too cold beverages.

CHARGE B. & M. IS CRIPPLED BY 'ECONOMY' PLAN

The charge was made today by employes of the Boston & Maine Railroad that the policy of economy recently adopted has greatly crippled the service of the entire system and threatened the safety of the traveling public.

Officials of the Boston & Maine and of the controlling New Haven deny all these charges. In answer an employe today produced a copy of a general order posted by H. C. Robinson:

After tonight passenger train inspection at Concord passenger station will be discontinued and all trainmen will do their own coupling and uncoupling and air test when the work of this nature is required. Conductors of trains requiring services of inspector on account of hot boxes or other mechanical defects will wire Concord ahead to enable inspector to be on hand.

(Signed) H. C. ROBINSON,
Superintendent Southern Division.

This economy, the men say, calls upon men untrained in inspection to do that work.

At the inward and outward baggage rooms of the Boston & Maine it was learned today that the extra men, always put on to handle the heavy influx of trunks and bags and bundles during the Summer rush, have not been hired.

Here is the story of a man on the floor:

"About eight men are regularly employed in the outward and inward baggage rooms, forty in each. Every Summer in the past this force has had to be doubled to meet the heavy business. The extra men always have been hired in the middle of May. No extras were put on this season. Last Friday the fellows higher up were compelled to hire ten men to help out."

GIRL'S LIFE ON SHIP SAVED BY BOSTON WOMAN

Mrs. Annie McCall was today hailed by fellow-passengers on the steamship Parisian ,from Glasgow and Moville, as the heroine of the voyage, having at the risk of her own life saved Mary Livingston from being swept overboard when a heavy sea broke on board and caused consternation among those gathered on deck. Mrs. McCall, who lives at No. 17 Minton street, Dorchester, was slightly injured.

On Monday, when the Parisian was in mid-Atlantic, the ship ran into heavy weather. The wind blew a gale, and the water rose in heavy combers, but it was not considered rough enough to keep the passengers within, and many of them were on deck, when suddenly a big sea struck the vessel amidships, rolled over the rails and drove everyone to shelter.

Mary Livingston was caught in the wave, and to the horror of the others she was picked up and was being carried over the rail when Mrs. McCall, who was close by, seized the girl just as she reached the steamer's side. The brave Scotch woman slipped on the wet deck and was thrown against the rail with such force that one of her legs was injured.

She did not report her injury at the time. Her attending physician now expresses a fear of blood poisoning.

MISS ADELAIDE HARVEY CHASE, daughter of "the Sherlock Holmes of Figures," who is to marry grandson of the late Governor Tuttle of New Hampshire.

This Pretty West Newton Girl's Wedding Is to Be a Society Event of December Next.

Harvey S. Chase, Massachusetts' self-styled "Sherlock Holmes of Figures," has just announced the engagement of his daughter, Adelaide Harvey Chase, to Hiram Tuttle Folsom of Pittsfield, N. H., grandson of the late Governor Hiram A. Tuttle of New Hampshire.

Mr. Chase was formerly employed by Governor Foss as an accounting expert to investigate the State departments, and in this connection had his famous war with State Treasurer Stevens. At present he is in the Treasury Department at Washington. Even there, he has had to force his way into one of the offices to examine the books.

The engagement was announced at Mr. Chase's West Newton home, No. 61 Temple street. The wedding will take place in December in West Newton. Miss Chase is a Newton High School girl and extremely popular. Folsom lives in Pittsfield, N. H., with his grandmother, the widow of the late Governor. He is the junior partner in the lumber firm of Welch & Tuttle, of the New Hampshire town.

Mr. Chase won fame through his controversy with State Treasurer Stevens. He was appointed by Governor Foss on a board of expert accountants, and was set to work investigating the State Treasurer's office. Before that he had worked for the city, and presented a bill for a thousand dollars odd—which incensed Mayor Fitzgerald and led to a words battle between Chase and Councillor Walter S. Glidden. Chase had charged $50 a day for his services, and from $10 to $25 a day for the services of his assistants.

Chase, who has been called the "Sherlock Holmes of Figures," is a big, black-bearded man of commanding presence. When he went to work for Governor Foss he went to the State Treasurer's office and began an investigation. After he had examined the books, he made a report, which Treasurer Stevens characterized as "inaccurate" and "erroneous."

BRYAN TRIES TO QUIET JAPS BY A SECRET DEAL

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The startling information was given to the AMERICAN by an official close to the administration, that the negotiations between Japan and the United States on the protests against the California land law had reached a point from which it could be stated "there would be no further difficulty."

The intimation was broadly made by this official that the forthcoming reply of the Secretary of State to the last Japanese note would be "satisfactory to Japan." Further than this the AMERICAN'S informant would not go.

That there could be a secret agreement, for some time at least, which would be satisfactory to the Japanese Premier, is altogether possible.

Most foreign governments like Russia, Japan, Great Britain, etc., conduct their international negotiations by their Premiers, who have power to make treaties and agreements, without referring them to the national Parliaments. Under that political system, a statement from Secretary Bryan could be accepted as couched also by the Japanese Premier and exploited by him as satisfactory to the Japanese government.

In order, however, for an agreement between the United States and Japan to become valid and binding, it must be ratified by the United States Senate.

It happens, however, that the American Premier can make no agreements that are binding unless they have been ratified by the Senate. It is for this reason that the statement made to the AMERICAN is of such importance. It means that the State Department has been able to prove to somebody high in authority in Japan and in Washington that the personal and even official views of the Secretary of State and of the President are a complete answer to the Japanese protest.

Child Labor Board Urges Public Aid

Chairman Tufts Issues Appeal to American Readers.

Following the example of the White Slave Investigation Commission, Representative Nathan D. Tufts of Waltham, chairman of the House committee appointed to investigate child labor conditions in the State, today, through the AMERICAN, appeals to all citizens to aid the committee in its work.

"I hope," he said, "that any citizens of the Commonwealth who have information or suggestions that they believe would be useful to the committee in accomplishing the purpose of its appointment will communicate with the chairman of the committee, addressing him at the State House."

Chairman Tufts also announced that the committee will organize this week and then get right down to work in earnest.

"We have a big task before us," he said, "and it is essential that we be given all the assistance possible by the public."

Hold Girl Who Shot Police Sweetheart

Miss Rose McGuri Bailed Out in Worcester.

WORCESTER, June 23.—Miss Rose McGuri was arraigned today before Judge Utley on a charge of assault with intent to kill—as a result of the shooting of Patrolman Albert H. Murphy, her fiance, last night. She pleaded not guilty and was held till Monday in $500, which her family furnished.

Murphy, in the hospital, is recovering. The story the police tell is that the girl and Murphy quarrelled about whom they should be married, and that she shot him and then tried to kill herself, but failed. Murphy urged the police not to arrest the girl.

Bryan Toasts Bride in Mild Grape Juice

BALTIMORE, June 23.—When William J. Bryan refused a glass of wine at the banquet which followed the wedding of Miss Ethel Preston McCormack to Francis H. McAdoo, the waiter promptly brought him a freshly opened bottle of grape juice. It was learned today that the host, knowing the aversion of the Secretary of State to the fermented grape, had especially arranged for the unfermented liquid.

Here's Best Way to Hire Boy or Girl

Just Apply to Placement Bureau of Chamber of Commerce.

Instead of putting out a "Boy Wanted" sign, Mr. Business Man, you can get a boy without that trouble by applying to the Placement Bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Thousands of Boston school boys, having finished school, are today out hunting jobs for the Summer. In a nutshell, the market for office boys, Johnnies-on-the-spot, and so on is flooded.

To help the Placement Bureau find positions for all these boys, the city of Boston has thrown open all the branch library stations to the boys and the Bureau agents. The Placement Bureau is also cooperating with the public schools. The bureau does the work without charge either to the pupil—either boy or girl—or to the employer.

Lauder in Pulpit Tries to Be Serious

English Congregation Laughs While He Points a Moral.

BRISTOL, Eng., June 23.—Harry Lauder appeared in the pulpit of the Castle Green Congregational Church yesterday and preached to an audience of 1,200 on "The Power of Sociability."

The little comedian meant to be serious but could not prevent his Scotch humor peeping out and when he told a funny story even the clergyman squirmed.

Mr. Lauder drew a picture of a boy who goes about losing work and money in drinking, ending in jail. He exhorted all parents to send their children to Sunday school.

"I began there," he added impressively."

RICH CHICAGO WOMAN'S DEATH LONDON PUZZLE

CHICAGO, June 23.—Despite the sifting findings of the London coroner, relatives and friends of Mrs. Vida M. Hudson, the wealthy divorced wife of Charles W. Hudson of Chicago, who was found dead from gas poisoning in her flat in St. George's Mansions, Westminster, have begun an international investigation to learn the motive behind her strange death.

While no definite charge has as yet been made, relatives of Mrs. Hudson in Chicago intimately strongly that they do not believe she committed suicide, as the coroner's jury found. Whether they believe that death was accidental or due to violence, none would say definitely, declaring that the matter was being "thoroughly investigated."

Leading in the investigation are the officials of the Northern Trust Company of Chicago, named as executor in the strangely worded will made by Mrs. Hudson a few hours before death, and found planned to her kimono. In this will Mrs. Hudson ordered that $5,000 be left to Michael Herbert, member of a prominent English family and an Oxford University student. Herbert cable reports have stated, has admitted that he was friendly with Mrs. Hudson and had visited her the night before her death.

The body of Mrs. Hudson has been interred in Kensal Green Cemetery, in West London, pending definite advices from relatives here. An attorney named Herbert, said to have been retained by relatives of Mrs. Hudson, had charge of all funeral arrangements, pending instructions from this country.

They were so badly lacerated from barbed wire fences and briars, so bruised from falls and collisions with obstructions in their wild flight in the dark that they had to be put in the hospital.

Daring Gowns at Race Shock Paris

Papers Rebuke Styles at the Auteuil Courses.

PARIS, June 23.—Even the Parisian journals, used as they are to daring styles in women's dresses, spoke rebukingly today of some of the gowns seen yesterday at the fashionable Auteil race course. Auteuil sets the latest word in fashions, the decree being that right skirts are giving away to transparent garments which offer absolutely no obstacle to the eye. Many women wore skirts of white, succeeding so transparent that they failed utterly to serve the purpose of covering. The gowns, which are mostly free from frills, are cut extremely low in front and even lower in back. The slashed skirt dividers exceeded the limit. Some of them were not only slit at the sides but in the front and rear as well.

FEAR POLITICAL DISASTER FROM M'NAB CHARGES

which will be accepted. His charge was that McReynolds had prevented the prosecution of Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti, "indicted for a felony crime which has ruined two girls of respected parentage." Caminetti is the son of Immigration Commissioner Caminetti, and the friends of the men have been hoosting in San Francisco that the wealth and influence in Washington of their relatives would block the prosecution. Caminetti's father was appointed Immigration Commissioner by President Wilson.

This is the astonishing story of the California white slave case. Lola Norris and Marsha Warrington are two typical young women of the Golden West, the one fifteen, the other twenty years of age—pure minded, clean living, virtuous and upright daughters of American parents of the prosperous middle class.

Miss Norris, pretty, blue eyed, slender, with auburn hair and blond sinile, is the daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento—W. E. Norris.

Miss Warrington is slighter even than her companion, ages blue and pretty in a dainty, delicate, spiritual way. Lola—the daughter of T. H. Warrington, resident agent in Sacramento of the Santa Fe Railroad.

Across the path of these two girls came Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti. Diggs is the son of a family rich and powerful in the Sacramento Valley. Caminetti is the son of former State Senator A. Caminetti. Both men are married.

Under the names of Fisher and Whitman, Caminetti and Diggs began to court the girls. Automobile rides and wine suppers followed.

Plan to Flee City.

Then the plan to leave the city began to take shape—the journey that was to land the two couples in the Federal net under the White Slave law.

It was represented to the girls that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were aware of the indiscretions that had been committed, and that warrants were out for the arrest of the girls. The best thing they could do, they were told, was to go to Nevada with the men.

After several meetings the four finally met at the Saddle Rock Restaurant in Sacramento and decided upon the journey. This was on the night of March 11. They went to the South Pacific Station and took the Overland train at midnight for Reno. Up to the last, it is declared, the girls pleaded with their seducers to be allowed to go home and tell their parents of their troubles. Miss Warrington rebelled at the station and did not board the train until she was taunted by the others.

Once upon the train, the girls gave themselves up to the plans for the elopement and ceased to rebel. The four traveled in one stateroom.

A special agent for Warrington had discovered that the elopers had gone to the Riverside Hotel, in Reno.

When he entered their room at the hotel and called the girls by name, they rushed into his arms, sobbing pitifully and begged to be taken home.

On the way to the police station Diggs turned to the young women and said:

"Now, remember, girls, it is up to you whether we go to the penitentiary or no."

"I wish they would put me in an iron box," Diggs said at the police station. "I don't know what Mr. Warrington will do to me."

"It will drop hard," agreed Caminetti.

The police feared an attempt at lynching, so intense was the feeling of the people of Sacramento against the two young men. The girls were taken there to the office of District Attorney Wachhorst, whose they told their story freely. Then they were taken to a physician's office.

Here in the doctor's office they met their parents for the first time.

Bonds were arranged for them, and they were taken home. The young men preferred to remain in their cells.

"We could have arranged for bonds for $100,000," they said, "but we do not want to avail ourselves of this, for the reason that threats have been made to shoot us. We would rather stay here for the present."

EXPECT MORE REQUESTS FOR M'REYNOLDS' HEAD AS SLAVE CASE SEQUEL

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Other requests that Attorney McReynolds be removed from the Cabinet were expected to follow that of Clayton Harrington, formerly a local judge, on account of trouble that arose between the Attorney-General and Detective Burns of New York over the Diggs-Caminetti cases. McNab was awaiting word as to whether his resignation had been accepted at Washington.

Correspondence made public by McNab today purported to show that he had acted in perfect accord with his duty in trying to bring up for trial Drew Caminetti and Maury Diggs accused of violating the White Slave law.

McNab also told of the activity of former State Senator Caminetti, father of one of the defendants and recently appointed Commissioner-General of Immigration, in trying to delay the trial.

McNab also made public today the telegram he had received from Attorney-General McReynolds ordering him to desist from action in the cases of two of the eight directors of the Eastern Fuel Company, indicted by a Federal Grand Jury.

Three Priests with Borasky Last Day

Stefan Borasky—who will die in the electric chair a few minutes after midnight tonight—spent the day in his cell in the death house at Charlestown talking with three priests.

One, the Rev. Father Thomas T. Smith of Springfield, came there at Borasky's request. Borasky had become attached to him while confined at the York street jail in Springfield, and asked for his presence. The Rev. Father Alphonsus W. Fighewski of Chelsea and the Rev. Father Michael J. Murphy, the prison chaplain, were also with the condemned man. Father Murphy will go with him to the chair.

Borasky is twenty-six. In September, 1911, he killed Rose Unansky, an old woman living in a little house at West Granville, and stole $60—her savings. He was cheerful and unconcerned today, ate heartily, and slept well last night.

Ex-Fire Capt. Wilson Dead at Age of 85

Carlin C. Wilson, who for fifty years was a member of the Boston Fire Department, is dead at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fannie M. Jones, at No. 119 Walnut street, Somerville. When pensioned and retired from the fire department in 1907 he was captain of Engine 10 on Mt. Vernon street. Captain Wilson was born in Windham, N. H., in 1828. He was a member of King Solomon's Lodge of Masons, the Hesperia Lodge I. O. O. F., the Trimount Encampment I. O. O. F., and of the Boston Veteran Firemen's Association.

SWIFT SHARPLY QUIZZES ICEMEN UPON "FAMINE"

Aroused by the statements of certain ice dealers that an ice famine in Boston is inevitable and that ice price of ice is bound to go higher, Attorney-General Swift today, for the second time since he began his ice investigation, personally visited the offices of the big ice companies in the Metropolitan District in an effort to find out what the real situation is.

The Attorney-General quietly interrogated various dealers and in some cases demanded that they produce their books, and made careful notes on some of the entries.

The dealers claim that only about two-thirds of the annual crop was harvested and give as a reason that Spring this year came nearly a month earlier than usual.

The Attorney-General, who is strongly of the opinion that the public is already paying a sufficiently high price, wants to find out whether these statements of the ice dealers are true in order that he may be able to cope with any situation that may arise.

Roxbury's 4th Plans.

JUDGE REBUKES POLICEMAN FOR CLUBBING MEN

Judge Fallon administered a rebuke to Patrolman William E. Carr of Station 6 in the South Boston District Court today and discharged the four young men whom Carr had arrested for intoxication and assaulting him.

"I find," said Judge, "that the four defendants, Patrick F. Lydon, John Hanlon, Henry Downey and Charles Feinetti, were violently and viciously abused by Officer Carr while at the box under arrest.

"No good and decent policeman would use his club to strike an intoxicated man on the head. Instead of using his club he ought to call for assistance.

"The evidence shows that John Hanlon was not drunk as claimed. I believed his story that he had one glass of beer and was attracted to the scene by the crowd. Neither do I think that the other three defendants were intoxicated and I find that they were abused rather than the officer."

Patrolman Carr declared that the four young men were fighting drunk and that they struck and kicked him brutally. Other policemen corroborated him about the alleged intoxicated condition of the accused, but the police story was disputed by spectators.

Lieutenant John M. Devine of Chemical 8 said Carr beat Lydon and Downey over the head with his club. He said he thought the assault was unnecessary and brutal. He was supported by Mr. and Mrs. John Coleman and Mrs. Mary Harris.

Attorney Edward P. Barry, counsel for the young men, asked for a warrant against Patrolman Carr in open court, but Judge Fallon declined to grant it. Counsel says he will carry the matter to District Attorney Pelletier.

Grant Demands of 200 Italian Bakers

Two hundred members of the Italian Bakers' Union went back to work today after an over-Sunday strike for a sixty-hour week and wages of $18, $14 and $12 for first, second and third class bakers respectively. Two hundred and fifty are still on strike. Twenty master bakers agreed to the demands of the strikers and forty are still holding out. Joseph Massuli was elected president of the union, recently organized by the A. F. of L., after the I. W. W. had attempted to organize the men. The Hebrew Bakers' Union has voted to supply the strikers with coffee, rolls and money while they are on picket duty.

Ask Receiver for Baptist Watchman

George E. Horr of Newton, Joseph W. Swain of Cambridge and Edmund F. Merrian of Sharon have asked the Supreme Court for the appointment of a receiver for the Watchman, a Baptist publication. The court issued an order of notice summoning the officers and directors of the publication to come into court July 2 and show cause why an injunction restraining them from doing business should not be issued, and a receiver appointed. Horr claims $2,100, due on a loan; Swain claims $1,100, due on a loan, services rendered and a contract; and Merriam asks $2,400, due on a loan and for services.

"THERE IS NO GREATER THING IN TRAVEL THAN A HIGH AVERAGE OF SAFETY."—Springfield Republican, June 13, 1913.

OFFICIAL RECORD

New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co.

The many erroneous statements and false reports placed before the public in the Brandeis campaign against New England's railroad system, which has been almost continuous now for six years, and which finds its opportunity in accidents as well as labor and political agitation, makes necessary that the true record of the New Haven Road in respect to passenger train accidents should be set forth, that there may be no further excuse for repeated misrepresentations, which misrepresentations are against the business interests of New England and New York, and do not promote efficiency in administration or organization.

In the ten years from June 30, 1903, to June 15, 1913, a period covered by the incumbency of President Charles S. Mellen, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad operated 5,078,750 trains.

These trains covered a distance aggregating 158,531,541 miles, practically 6,341 times the circuit of the globe.

There was carried on these 5,078,750 trains over these 158,531,541 miles a total of 755,678,338 passengers paying fare.

In these ten years there were just 6 accidents to trains in which persons traveling on them were killed. The number of passengers who lost their lives as a result of such accidents was just 29.

In six of these ten years—1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1909 and 1910—not a single passenger was killed in an accident, although in those years approximately 3,060,000 trains were operated, carrying 441,426,000 passengers over a total mileage of 93,593,311.

To correct the many erroneous statements that have appeared in print, the figures by years are here given:

YEARS.	PASSENGERS CARRIED.	Train accidents in which passengers were killed.	Passengers killed in train accidents.
1903 (Last six months)	34,090,448	0	0
1904 - - -	63,234,687	0	0
1905 - - -	66,507,138	0	0
1906 - - -	72,521,069	0	0
1907 - - -	75,453,778	0	0
1908 - - -	74,382,023	1	1
1909 - - -	79,849,297	0	0
1910 - - -	83,860,031	0	0
1911 - - -	83,768,348	2	12
1912 - - -	85,350,409	2	10
1913 (to June 15) -	36,661,110	1	6
TOTAL - -	755,678,338	6	29

In the four accidents of 1911 and 1912 no Coroner's verdict or investigation by State or National authorities found any defect in the construction of roadbed, the condition of motive power, or equipment, or in condition or operation of signals.

The territory covered by the New York, New Haven & Hartford is such that its passenger traffic is the densest of any large railroad in the country.

It is because of this record for safety and because of the superior roadbed and equipment that the public is shocked over every accident, of any character, from any cause, that takes place upon this road.

STAR ATHLETES TRAINING FOR CHICAGO MEET

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

Great preparations are being made by the different athletic clubs for the coming national championships which will take place in Chicago on July 4 and 5. Every New England athlete who is capable of showing any championship form will be given a trip to the Windy City.

The fight for the title this year will be the closest ever witnessed in an A. A. U. championship, for, unlike the past, the New York clubs do not rule favorites for winning the meet. The Chicago A. A. will make a great attempt to land first place, and any club which finishes ahead of that organization will have a hard uphill battle to fight for the Western Association will be able to enter every man who has a desire to compete while the Eastern associations and clubs will be handicapped by having an expense of nearly a hundred dollars for every extra athlete who makes the trip.

The Boston A. A. will be relieved of a large amount of this expense by having nearly every star athlete of the association make the trip at the expense of the New England Amateur Athletic Association which has voted nearly a thousand dollars for the trip.

On the performances of next Saturday in the New England championships will rest the chances of the star New Englanders of visiting Chicago for every athlete who shows that he is able to compete with the best men in the country will be selected. The New York A. C. and the Irish-American A. C. will send a team of nearly thirty men, while many of the Southern and far Western clubs will also have star athletes competing.

Two athletes who are almost sure to be returned winners are Lippincott and Meredith. These two champions will compete under the colors of the University of Pennsylvania, which will rob many of the big clubs of much needed points.

Howard P. Drew, who is almost sure to be returned a winner in the 100-yard dash, will also compete unattached. This will break up the run of points so that any organization capable of scoring four first should be able to win the meet. The Irish-American club of New York, which won last year's contest, will suffer from the loss of Sheppard and Meyers. Sheppard has not shown any form that will entitle him to any consideration, while Meyers, the star sprinter of that club, is also running very poorly. Kiviat has been defeated by Powers, the local miler, and if he is unable to come back and show some of his old time form the Irish-American club will be out of the meet.

New England League Averages

Pearson Leads Batters Again

By W. P. PETERS.

(Official Scorer of the New England League.)

Pitcher Alexander F. Pearson of the Lawrence team is up to his old tricks again. He is leading the stickers of the New England league with the mark of .413. It is nothing unusual for Pearson to be at the top, for he has held the honor more times than any other player since he came into the league in the Spring of 1916. Pearson is consistently a good hitter.

The slump that has hit the Lowell team has affected Jimmy Magee, who was the league leader a week ago. He suffered a loss of thirty points during the week. Jack O'Brien of the Fall River team holds the runner-up position to Pearson, but he has played in only ten games.

Twenty-seven hitters have an average of .300 or better. Lowell leads in number with six. Fall River, Worcester and Brockton have four each. Lawrence and Portland have three each. Lynn has two and New Bedford's only .300 hitter is Pitcher King, who is batting for an even .500.

ROWING MEN FAVOR A THREE MILE COURSE

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS,

America's Foremost Amateur Oarsman.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Rowing experts here today are advocating the chopping off of one mile from the standard four-mile varsity boat race, declaring that a three-mile race would furnish a more spectacular battle than does the four-mile.

In backing up their suggestion the experts point out that in Saturday's race at Poughkeepsie practically every crew came up to the three-mile mark rowing a perfect stroke and in excellent condition, but after that nature rebelled against the terrific strain and the strokes slowed down, slowing up the race and making the finish less spectacular at the four-mile mark than it would have been had the end come at the three-mile post.

The varsity eight-oared race Saturday, which Syracuse won by a half length over Cornell, was one of the most thrilling ever staged on the Hudson. The Syracusians came up from fourth place at the two and one-half-mile mark, first passed Cornell and then took the lead away from Columbia, which crew soon dropped back and finished in fifth position.

Almost as remarkable as the Syracuse spurt was that of Washington. Passing the three and one-half-mile mark in fifth position over three lengths behind the leader, the Seattle boys began stroking at a tremendous clip, overwhelmed Wisconsin and Columbia, and finished third only a trifle more than a length behind Syracuse. Had the spurt been timed sooner, and the oarsmen the stamina to carry it along, the Western aggregation might have won the race.

White Bear Nine Is Seeking Games

The White Bear baseball team is planning a hard campaign for this Summer. The team has played a fast, snappy game so far this season and is anxious to book a game for next Saturday and another for July 4.

Included in the lineup are such well known players as Cushing, Murphy, McCarthy, McDonald, Donovan, O'Leary, McHugh, Hagberty and Cass. John Craven is manager. Any fast teams may arrange games with the White Bears by getting into communication with "Jack Ivy" McCarthy, No. 50 Linwood Street, Roxbury. Telephone Roxbury 1760, between 8 and 9 p. m.

Get Your Free Baseball Tickets, Fans!

It is important for every AMERICAN reader who holds one of the numbered baseball checks which have been distributed broadcast throughout New England to carefully examine the list of numbers printed in the Boston AMERICAN "SPORTING EXTRA EDITION" every evening. This edition is out at 6:30 and the list of numbers is printed only in this edition.

Thousands and thousands of these checks have been distributed—each one numbered—and a list of 100 numbers is being printed each day in the AMERICAN'S "SPORTING EXTRA EDITION."

All you have to do is to watch this daily list, and when a number appears which is a duplicate of the one which is on the check you hold bring or send same to the American Promotion Dept., No. 5 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox games on the home grounds.

Remember, if a duplicate of the number on your check is printed in the "SPORTING EXTRA EDITION" of the AMERICAN it means a free grandstand seat—and without a cent of expense to you.

Thousands of these checks are now being distributed among AMERICAN readers. If YOU haven't yet obtained some, ask your newsdealer or newsboy, who will be glad to supply you.

Checks may also be obtained at American Promotion Dept.

Watch your numbers carefully. If your number does not appear today, it may tomorrow. When it does, it means a free Red Sox ticket for you.

Bike Stars in Big Races at Revere

Jimmy Moran of Chelsea, the veteran pace follower, is satisfied that he is as fast as ever, and tomorrow night, at the Revere Beach track he will have the opportunity to prove his contentions. Moran has been matched to meet Elmer Collins of Lynn, the sprint champion, and Walter Mitten in a three-cornered race for twenty-five miles. Mitten has been riding remarkably well behind the engines this year, while Wiley can always be depended upon to acquit himself with honor.

The two-mile motor race between Charley Turville, Jimmie Hunter and Alex Ruden promises to be the spectacular affair of the night. There will also be the usual amateur and professional events.

Bobolink Is Winner.

A race for the Class S boats of the Squantum Yacht Club was held yesterday over a seven-mile course off the clubhouse. The Wawenock finished first, but lost to the Bobolink on corrected time.

Half Yearly "Uncalled For" Sale

Taking, as I do, orders for about eight hundred suits a week, on an average, with the strongest guarantee ever given by a custom tailor (to wit: Any garment ordered of me, if not fitted to the perfect satisfaction of the customer, will be immediately replaced by a new garment), means that sometimes I have occasion to put on the line suits that I call "uncalled for," made to fit the customer, but on account of not being done on time, death or some other cause, the suit remains with me after a deposit has been paid. Twice each year, in all my stores, I dispose of these garments at little less than half of what they originally sold for. I have found in the past that a transient customer, getting a good suit with a Mitchell the Tailor label, generally becomes a permanent customer.

Suits made up to measure by me, blue serges, black unfinished worsteds, and a varied assortment of fancy worsteds in all the new pencil stripes, original price $15, $18, $20. For the next week, if you can be fitted, the price will be

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—The Red Sox will try hard to defeat the Athletics here today in the third game of their series and by so doing draw a game nearer to the league leaders. Ray Collins is expected to pitch for the champions. The big port sider is usually very effective against the Mackmen.

The work of the Boston in the present series with the Athletics has been of the very best. The Red Sox have played like regular champions and the Athletics now realize that Boston is the team that they will have to beat out if they are to win the American League hunting this year.

Sox Playing Slashing Game.

The Cleveland Naps started the season at a fast pace and for a time it looked as though they would give the local team a hard battle for the championship. Birmingham's men, however, have not been playing very well lately and they are not considered seriously in the pennant struggle.

The Red Sox, however, are playing every bit as good baseball as they did last year when they won the American League pennant and the world's championship. The pitchers are performing in grand style while the rest of the team is also going well.

The Athletics, on the other hand, are none too strong. True, Mack has a wonderful infield and a fairly good outfield but is woefully weak in the box. Plank is the only pitcher who may be relied upon to deliver the goods day in and day out, and Eddie is not as good as he was several years ago.

Youngsters Are Not Reliable.

Bender, at the best, is only an in and outer, while Brown and Houck lack experience. Mack has several other young hurlers but none of them have shown good form.

Brown is expected to pitch for the Athletics today. If Collins is steady, the Red Sox feel confident that they will win.

Alger and Alberts in Battle at Gloucester

Houck Says He Has Hurt His Hand But May Only Want Vacation.

By JACK CONWAY.

GEORGE ALGER, the Cambridge lightweight, will meet Johnny "Kid" Alberts of New York in a twelve-round bout before the Lenox A. C., in Gloucester tonight. Alger will have to put up a slashing battle in order to win, as Alberts is a sterling performer, and has been winning his contests with great regularity lately.

The Cambridge boy is confident that he will be returned the winner. He is a very skilful boxer and a fairly good hitter. He believes that his speed will enable him to outpoint the rugged Alberts.

Rhoder McDonald will swap punches with Dave Powers of Malden in the semi-final whirl of ten rounds. Patsy DeLuca of the North End was originally scheduled to battle with McDonald, but he has notified the matchmaker of the Lenox Club that he will be unable to box.

Tommy McFarland of the South End will oppose "Kid" Lee of Chelsea in the opening six-round encounter, while "Young" Morley of Roxbury is listed to meet Eddie Wallace in another six-round "go."

THERE will not be any show at the A. A. this week. Leo Houck claims that he will be unable to meet George Chip, as he has injured one of his hands. This excuse is as sucient as dear old Ann. Boxers have used it for years, and are still able to get away with it in the majority of cases.

"I don't believe that Houck is afraid to battle with Chip, as Leo is a real game fellow. Houck, however, is human, like the rest of us, and probably thought that the cool breezes of Atlantic City, or some other seashore resort, would be more enjoyable than the grind of a training camp.

Well, Leo, the only thing that gets my Angora is the fact that I can't be with you, for, believe me, it is not the easiest thing in the world to work eight hours per day, just now. Am I right, boys?

EDDIE CAMPI should give Charley Ledoux a beating when they clash in their twenty-round bout at Vernon, tomorrow night. It would take a great deal of space to tell all that Ledoux does not know about boxing. He is a strong, willing little fellow, and can hit fairly hard, but that is about all. He would be the easiest kind of picking for a master workman like Jimmy Walsh. Ledoux failed to startle us by his work in his recent "go" in this city against Philly McGovern of Brooklyn.

EDDIE KEEVIN writes that he has signed Jimmy Walsh to meet Ad Zotte of Franklin Conley at Salt Lake City, on June 28. Walsh is hot on the trail of Johnny Kilbane, the Cleveland youth who holds the featherweight championship.

JOE EAGAN, the skilful South Boston lightweight, has been matched to meet Steve Kennedy of Lawrence in a twelve-round bout in Lowell, on July 4. The men will box to a decision, and have agreed to make the lightweight limit.

THE following letter may be fo interest to "Kid" Block, manager of "Young" Morgan of Manchester, N. H.:

Boxing Editor, AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I noticed that "Kid" Block challenged any featherweight in New England, through the AMERICAN in behalf of "Young" Morgan of Manchester, N. H. I wish to state that Frank McManus of Salem is willing to clash with Morgan, provided that the latter will make 122 pounds.

Very truly yours,
JOHN B. CRONIN.
No. 346 Bridge street, Salem.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH, who is considered one of our best little 6-ftite "hopes," will try to gain some more fame and glory, not to mention a few extra iron men, when he battles with George Rodel, the Beer heavyweight, in a ten-round contest in New York, Friday night. The bout has aroused considerable interest, and is sure to be witnessed by a big crowd of "fans." Rodel is not a champion, but is as strong as the proverbial Hen, and can assimilate a great deal of punishment.

Ennis Is Sick; May Give Up Long Hike

MILL VILLAGE, Pa., June 23.—John Ennis, the pedestrian who was taken suddenly ill with stomach trouble here last Thursday morning, is still confined to his bed at the Burgess Hotel and his son Frank, says there is little hope that his father will continue his walk to Minneapolis. He is still in great pain. If he does not show marked improvement today he will be brought to his home at Stamford, Ct.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

HERE'S a bit of "dope." You may take it for what it is worth. Syracuse beat Cornell, Washington, Wisconsin and Columbia in a close finish on the Hudson Saturday. Pennsylvania was ten lengths behind the last of these. A few weeks ago Princeton beat Harvard handily on the Charles River. Pennsylvania was two lengths behind. Friday Harvard beat Yale by fifteen lengths on the Thames.

QUERY—Where would Yale have been in Saturday's boat race?

ANYWAY, Harvard is now champion of about everything that has been at issue between Yale and Harvard, completing the job with Saturday's baseball game.

* * *

AFTER beating the Athletics two straight games at Philadelphia, the Red Sox were today conceded a chance to win the American League pennant by those who a week ago condemned the champions to a place in the second division.

The Sox have won thirteen games of the seventeen they have played since they came home from the West, their onward career reaching a climax when they twice humbled the Mackmen, including the pride of Eddie Plank.

The champions opened this week eleven games behind the Athletics, having gained three full games on the leaders in less than two weeks and having jumped up two places to third position in the last week.

* * *

WHILE the Sox are still eleven games to the bad, the fact that they cut down the Athletics' lead by more than one-fifth in ten days indicates that they really have a chance to regain their place at the top.

* * *

THE league season will not be half over for more than two weeks yet. It naturally follows that any team that can climb as far in two weeks as the Red Sox have must be considered as a serious contender for the banting.

* * *

AFTER many starts and many failures, Nap Rucker put one on the Giants Saturday. Many a time Nap would have beaten the Giants if his team could have made two measly runs behind him. At the same time that Rucker was doing this the Phillies took their double-header from Boston. This gave them back most of the advantage they lost in Chicago when the Giants were winning regularly from the Reds. Since Meinius moved to Pittsburgh late last week, Doolin has been creeping away from him

BASEBALL CHATTER

The Browns and White Sox divided a double-header yesterday, Browns winning the first game, 2 to 0, and the White Sox taking the second by the same score.

In the first game Scott of the White Sox established a record by striking out fifteen players, yet he lost the game because Lecerena, the Browns' pitcher, pitched but two hits and no runs, while Scott yielded five hits, which were productive of two tallies.

In the second game Ed Walsh allowed the Browns nine hits and Wellman and Allison allowed the White Sox only four, but the White Sox hits came at opportune times, while the Browns kept the St. Louis hits so scattered that no runs resulted.

The Tigers, by scoring one run in the sixth inning of yesterday's game, broke the string of unscored innings which Venn Gregg of the Naps was compiling. Up to that time he had pitched thirty-two innings without yielding a run.

The Dodgers seem to have regained their sea legs, and once again they are making golves like a first division club. After a disastrous start on their western trip they wound up in a blaze of glory and Saturday triumphed over the Giants making their sixth straight win.

No team in either league is travelling at a more terrific clip just now than the World's Champions Red Sox. A month ago they were something like 400 points back of the Athletics. Now they are only 193 points from first place and playing with machine like regularity.

Sport writers are predicting that the slump that most inevitably come to every team is soon to strike the Athletics. But it will have to be a mighty one to unseat the Quakertown players from the top rung of the American League ladder for just now they are leading the second place Naps by 5½ full games, a matter of 108 points. Which is quite a lot.

The Pirates came up from behind in the eighth in their game against the Reds yesterday and pounded out three runs which gave them a 5-4 victory.

The Naps and Tigers divided a double-header yesterday, the Detroit aggregation winning the first game in the tenth and the Naps romping home with the second.

Pierce, the recruit pitcher of the Cubs, shut out the Cardinals with one hit yesterday, although he struck out but two men.

Ty Cobb has just perfected the cuttlefish slide, and is producing great results with it. The cuttlefish, as most everybody knows, elects an inky fluid whenever pursued which darkens the water in the vicinity of the cuttlefish that the pursuers lose sight of him.

Cobb doesn't come forth any dark fluid when sliding into bases, he uses dust to dim the vision of the umpire. If it looks as if there's going to be a close decision at the base, Ty hits the ground and slides into the sack, while kicking up a cloud of dust. With the runner and baseman hidden by the dust the umpire of course cannot see the play, and even though the runner may have tagged Ty out before he reaches the sack, the umpire must give Ty the benefit of the doubt.

PILGRIMS MEET DOOIN'S MEN AGAIN TODAY

The Pilgrims will clash with the Phillies at the Walpole Street Grounds again today. Stallings' men were determined to get revenge for the double defeat which they received from the Quakers Saturday.

The Pilgrims are not discouraged because they failed to break even with the Phillies Saturday. They realize that Doolin has one of the best baseball teams in either of the big leagues and they will have to play a slashing game of ball if they are to vanquish the visitors.

The Phillies are certain to give the Giants a merry battle for first place in the National League pennant race. Doolin's men are playing good ball and the pitchers are performing well. The Phillies' pitchers have been a factor in the success of the team this season. There are few teams which are as fortunate in the way of star pitchers as the Quakers.

Tyler will probably pitch for Boston today, while Brennan may perform in the box for the Phillies.

Jap Comes Here to Study Baseball

NEW YORK, June 23.—Kojiro Okazaki, who is president of baseball in Japan, is in town today. He came to this country for the purpose of seeing some of the major league teams play baseball. He'll carry some of the ideas he gathers back to Japan.

THE season for sales like the season for quality is of short duration. If you're going to purchase a HILTON suit at a knock-off price, you've got to act right-off. There is necessarily a limit to our display of suits because limit means exclusiveness, and exclusiveness means a lot to the style man.

The suits included in our Astor House Sale were made for STYLE MEN. The closing of our Astor House Shop has given Boston the rare opportunity to save money and secure style. The longer you stay away the shorter your chances become.

THE TRIPLE TIE

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

The Most Absorbing New Serial Any Newspaper Has Published in Years

What Has Gone Before

GORDON KELLY, a young man from the mountains, who says that he has never played on any ball club and that he has never even seen a ball game in his life, joins the Atlanta club and by his phenomenal playing becomes the sensation of the baseball world and the Boston Red Sox buy his release for $50,000. In the meantime, he meets and falls in love with Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a rich timber speculator. In his first game in Atlanta Gordon hits a terrific smash. He sends in three runs, but in sliding for home he crashes into the catcher, is knocked unconscious and his leg is broken. Mildred Deery runs on the field and takes his head in her lap. The night after Gordon Kelly leaves the hospital he disappears as if from the face of the earth.

Galen Deery takes his daughter to his bungalow in the mountains. One day Mildred goes on a fishing trip with Elmer Shepard, a boy, and is surprised by the sudden appearance of Gordon Kelly. Gordon says he then there.

Forrest Cain, a rich young man, follows Mildred and asks her to be his wife, and when she refuses he becomes ugly. Gordon and Elmer appear and Cain tries to shoot Gordon, but a stone thrown by the boy knocks the pistol from his hand.

Mildred and Gordon become engaged. He takes her to see his home, which proves to be a splendid property on which his father spent over two millions. He tells her how he has lived there all his life and of his father's tragic death. Then he shows Mildred and Elmer the ball field and gymnasium in which he has been exercising for years. His income is over a million a year.

Mildred and Gordon have a happy month together, until one day he is stunned by a cyclone. When he comes to his senses, he finds himself surrounded by four rough mountaineers, who overpower him and carry him to a rude cabin in the woods. Gordon asks permission to write a letter to let his friends know that he is safe and sends one to Mildred which contains a hidden meaning, as of course he can give no direct information. He becomes convinced that Forrest Cain is back of his abduction, but can learn nothing from his captors, although he is allowed to send several more letters. One day, while reading, with his back against a tree, something flashes across the page of his newspaper.

Of course the entire baseball world is wondering what has become of Gordon Kelly, and one day Farnsworth, of the Atlanta "Georgian," gets a tip that makes him follow Cain.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

THE train started and the conductor began his pilgrimage to collect fares. Not knowing where he was going Farnsworth paid cash fare from station to station and before long he had a pocket full of rebate slips. They travelled several hours before Cain made a move. Then he alighted at a small place Farnsworth had never heard of. Just as the train started again the newspaper man jumped off and, lighting a cigarette, kept his eyes on his man. He saw Cain go up to a Cracker who was holding a horse by the bridle. After a few words with him Cain mounted the animal and rode off up the road. Farnsworth debated a moment with himself and then approached the man who had been holding the horse. He was now leaning against a telegraph pole, with his hands in his pockets.

"Where does that road lead to?" he asked.

"Up over the mountains," replied the man.

"What place does it strike on the other side?"

"Pew Creek."

"How far is Pew Creek from here?"

"Bout thirty miles, I reckon."

No Other Horse.

"I want to get a horse and buggy or something to take me over that road. Can you fix me up?"

The native turned his head and spat, after which he looked at Farnsworth and grinned.

"That there horse you seen me give that men is the only doggone horse around here, suh," he said.

"Who is that man that got the horse?" he asked.

"You got me," replied the Cracker. "He come up here awhile ago and went on up the road on that same horse."

That was about all the information the native had to give. For the time being Farnsworth was "up against it." The only thing for him to do was to kill time and await Cain's return. When he did return Farnsworth resolved to go back to Atlanta on the same train with him and accuse him to his face of being responsible for the disappearance of Gordon Kelly.

A Long Wait

The wait proved to be a long one. Farnsworth ran out of cigarettes and suffered the tortures of the damned hour after hour. Night came on and spread her pall in inky blackness. Another hour passed. Flatly from up the railroad track Farnsworth heard the faint shriek of a locomotive and the far off rumble of a freight train. Then he saw the headlight flicker in the distance.

A moment later the sound of pounding hoofs reached the ears of the newspaper man from up the road, but was soon lost in the roar of the oncoming train. The locomotive, puffing loudly, rolled by dragging a long line of creaking, moaning, freight cars. Then from out of the darkness behind a horse, covered with lather, Forrest Cain, hatless, jumped from the saddle and running to the side of the train seized a grab-handle as it passed. At the same moment there came from behind Farnsworth the flash and the sharp report of a revolver, and a bullet whistled by his ear and sped toward its mark.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

WHEN Forest Cain started out on horseback over the road that led up into the Georgia mountains he had, doubtless, formed some plan of action that had to do with Gordon Kelly; else why should he trouble himself to make the tiresome trip from Atlanta and waste half a day in the saddle? Perhaps he meant to taunt the captive; perhaps he had some kind of a proposition to make which, if accepted, would send Gordon out of the State forever on his promise never to return; perhaps he figured in his egotism that with Gordon out of th way he could become friends again with Mildred and eventually win her. Whatever was on his mind, or why he made that ride up into the mountains, never was known.

The distance from the place Cain left the train to the spot where Gordon had been confined was about fifteen miles, uphill all the way. He noticed the black-bearded man, the leader of the four mountaineers, that he would visit them that day, and he requested him to meet him at the rendezvous of his previous visit—in the woods opposite the huge knob of granite—which made a mile of about ten miles for Cain.

A Silent Journey

Arriving at the granite knob, however, Cain found the black-bearded man seated on a horse and waiting for him in the road. The mountaineer gravely returned the other's greeting.

"How's the prisoner?" asked Cain, cheerfully.

"He's all right, I reckon; he was when I seen him last."

"Happy and cheerful, I suppose?" said Cain with a grin.

"I never seen a more cheerful man."

This reply did not seem to please the man from Atlanta. He scowled and remarked:

"Well, maybe he won't be so cheerful when he sees me."

"Maybe not," returned the mountaineer.

They had put their horses in motion and were riding on up the road in the direction from which the mountaineer had come.

"How did you capture him?" asked Cain.

The mountaineer's answers to the questions put to him by his companion seem quick enough when one reads them in type, but as a matter of fact there was considerable hesitancy. He took a particularly long time in framing an answer to Cain's last question. Finally he said:

"We got him."

The rest of the journey was made in silence. Holding up his end of a conversation seemed to be a painful undertaking on the part of the bearded man. Cain became busy with his own thoughts and did not trouble his companion further.

Arriving at the bridge that crossed Pew Creek, the mountaineer turned his horse off to the left and Cain followed.

"When we get to your hiding place," said Cain, "I want you men to keep an eye on that fellow. He's got a nasty temper. I don't want to kill him, so if he comes for me just hit him over the head, will you?"

The bearded man took his customary time before he made reply.

"You got a gun?" he asked.

"No," said Cain. "I forgot to bring one. But I don't need any; you are all armed."

The Bird Flown

No more was said. The going under foot was bad in some places and the horses had to pick their way carefully, but at last they mounted the ridge and went down on the further side of it and came to the clump of trees that surrounded the log cabin. They dismounted and the bearded man parted the brush and walked ahead, Cain following close behind. Three men were seated on the rough bench, which they had drawn from within the cabin.

"Where is he? Bring him out," cried Cain, pushing himself past the bearded man. There was a fierce gleam in his eye. He felt very brave.

The leader of the gang motioned to the door of the cabin, then took out his pipe and filled it with tobacco.

Cain stepped to the door and peered in.

"Hey, come out here," he ordered in a loud tone of voice, "I want to have a look at you."

There was no answer to this command.

"Step inside," the bearded man said, "He ain't goin' to bite you." He struck a match and lighted his pipe.

Cain entered the cabin and looked everywhere, but could not find his man. He rushed to the door.

"Where is he?" he demanded.

The nearest approach to a smile that ever wrinkled the bearded man's features now appeared on his face.

"He's done gone," he said, after a couple of puffs from his pipe.

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where, how?"

"Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

The blood rushed to Cain's face and for a moment he appeared to be choking.

"Gone, you lunkheads!" he cried in a fury. "What have I been paying you good money for? You are a lot of fools. I'll show you that you can't ——" Cain's tempestuous flow of words stopped suddenly.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

His Retainer

"What is that little boy crying about?" asked the kind old lady of the bigger boy.

"That other kid swiped his orange," was the response.

"But how is it that you have the orange now?"

"I've got the orange now because I'm the little chap's lawyer."

"Gone!" yelled Cain. "Gone where, how?" "Jest gone," replied the mountaineer, after a tantalizing pause.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THAT WILL BE EASY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a girl for about nine months and I love her, and I know she cares for me. How can I propose to her and court her?

H. W. H.

BEGIN by making her the object of all your attentions. Take her to places of amusement, consult her taste and wishes, never cease in your devotion, and before you realize it you will find your self engaged.

THEN DON'T DO IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man one year my senior for about two years, and thought very much of him, and we were on quite friendly terms. A few months ago we had a little quarrel and I got angry at him, but regret it very much now. Although I know that he does not love me, still I care for his friendship very much and I am very anxious to talk to him again, but I do not come in contact with him. Therefore, wish you would kindly advise me what course to take, for I do not want to apologize, as he would throw the same up to me.

SIGNORA.

YOUR prediction is as comforting to him that I don't understand why you seek a reconciliation. If he is so unjust, so petty as to taunt you for having apologized, then don't consider it for a moment. Let the matter rest as it is.

THERE IS NO REMEDY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty and about five feet ten. I keep company occasionally with a very pretty girl about my age, who is only five feet tall. Our acquaintances ridicule us, and by so doing have hurt her feelings till she has ceased to care for me and has even refused me the privilege of calling on her. I love her very much.

A. D. F.

YOU cannot reduce your height, nor may she increase hers, and if her regard for you is lessened by the senseless jokes of absurd friends, it hadn't a firm foundation in the beginning.

Tell her you love her. If she refuses you because of a matter of inches, ask your love elsewhere. Believe me, love takes no account of stature.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would itch all the more—so I got very little sleep.

"I tried many treatments, such as ——, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So I at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist, and kept on using them for about three months, when I was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it."

(Signed) Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, sores, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 4-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THAT fellow that just went out sings in a choir, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I always thought that fellows that sings in choirs was kind of pious and pure-like, but this man that just had his nails did was the limit. I don't mean he was a good kidder, like Joe Blow, the bookmaker, but old Joe is different to me than them other flirts that come in. Joe and me has been friends for so long that he can say 'marry me to-morrow, little one,' as often as he want to, or any other old thing that he feels like saying to me, only he never feels like saying any thing he shouldn't say."

"What in the world are you raving about?" asked the Head Barber.

"I am trying to talk simple and direct," said the Manicure Lady, coldly. "Simple and direct, George, the way the folks has to talk to bones like you. I thought I was making myself plain, but I guess the only way a intelligent person could tell you anything would be to get up and make signs, like a Dutchman ordering something to eat in a French restaurant. I was going to tell you about this fellow that just had his nails did. If I hadn't felt so sorry for his coarse work I might have jabbed his knuckles with a orange stick, but I let him go out thinking that he had found a lasting friend and admirer in Maisie, the beautiful nail waiffen. He certainly made me tired. I wish I knew the church he sang in. I'd like to tell the vestrymen how their little song bird talks weekdays."

WHY SHE DIDN'T.

"Why didn't you tell me that he was getting fresh?" asked the Head Barber. "Maybe he needed a barrup in the lamps."

"No rough work was necessary, George, though I thank you just the same for your chivalree," said the Manicure Lady. "As I said before, I let him think he was getting away with something. I always like to jolly along that kind of a two-face. It makes him brave, you see, George, and after awhile he gets so brave that he goes a-wooing to the wrong party and gets a hairpin between the slats.

"What instrooms little pink nails you have, Queenie,' he says to me. 'Next Sunday when I am singing my solo, I shall sing it to your nails, your lovely nails. And the tips of your fingers are like rose pearls,' he goes on, 'little velvety rose petals just out of the bud.'

"I didn't think that was such bad farm, George, because he said it kind of low and passionate, the way Tom Moore used to talk to his lady friends in London when they wasn't out somewhere with Lord Byron. But there is ways and ways for men to say things, and this young ware with the high C voice began getting so affectionate that I thought his celluloid collar would catch fire. He started squeezing my hand until I was afraid the little rose petal finger tips would get crushed for fair, and told me that he would like nothing better than to be in Italy with me, setting up on a veranda beholding a little blue lake and listening to the songs of the boatmen that row them gorgonolas, or whatever it is they call them boats in Venice. He didn't seem to think that it is a long hump from here to a little blue lake in Italy. Gee, I'd be perfectly happy if I could go on my honeymoon to some little blue lake up in New Hampshire."

DANGER AHEAD

"Well, I'm glad you let him down easy," said the Head Barber, "but if he ever comes in again and gets fresh I'll give him the bum's rush and tell him never know how he got on the car track."

"That's awful sweet of you, George," said the Manicure Lady, "but he won't come back. He thinks he's got me won now, and the next time he has to have his nails did he'll find another girl to win—the same way he won me. I wish I could think of some kind of a word that means a cross between an old gossiping woman and a human being that ain't a man, and I know one near-great that would get his number by the first mail. Gee, George, I'd rather manicure a cod."

Jealousy Slays Love

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service

BY NELL BRINKLEY

POOR little Love lies sleeping the last sleep of the dead,
While tears and sighs and weeping storm on above his head;
For the breath of the green-eyed monster has singed him with fatal fire.
And man and maid must shrink dismayed at the death of their Heart's Desire.

Poor little Love has perished 'neath the claws of the Monster Grim,
And the lovers who should have cherished, have wantonly murdered him.
For the doubts of the Jealous Monster first torture, and then conspire
With maid and man; for when doubt began 'twas the doom of their Heart's Desire.

The Modern Girl

A New Species of the Feminine Sex

By DOROTHY DIX

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

AN UNUSUAL REMARK

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in by the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves, are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier that a college-bred girl who is an anti.

A RICH GIRL

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see the girl standing behind a counter, or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been and rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

SHE KNEW

"We've read 'Damaged Goods,'" she said, "and we know what that sort of thing leads to—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Household Suggestions

A little soap shredded into the boiler on washing day makes the clothes a good color, and if you put a small piece into the starch it will make the ironing easier, and it imparts a lovely gloss to the clothes. All the little bits of soap that are left over should be put into a jar with a little water. Place the jar in a moderate oven and leave until the soap has dissolved. This is excellent for washing flannels and woollies things.

In choosing chickens observe chiefly the length of leg. The best chickens have short legs in proportion to the size of the body, the bones are small, and the flesh is white. The best test of age is found at the end of the breast-bone. When the bird is young the end of the bone is soft and gelatinous, and it becomes gradually harder as the age of the bird increases.

A good way in which to keep plants fresh without watering them when the house must be closed, is to take all the plants to the cellar or some other cool place, and set them in tubs, with an ordinary brick under each flower-pot. Pour into the tubs just enough water to cover the bricks. It is best to place the tubs by an east window if possible.

To boil milk without fear of burning, put two or three tablespoonfuls of water in the saucepan; let it boil quickly for two or three minutes; add the milk, and it will not burn, however fierce the fire may be.

The ordinary nervous headache will be greatly relieved, and in many cases entirely cured, by removing the waist of one's dress, knotting the hair high up on the head out of the way, and, while leaning over a basin, pinching a sponge soaked in water as hot as it can be borne on the back of the neck. Repeat this many times.

Before mending stockings with ordinary darning yarn, it is a good plan to boil the skein or yard over the spout of a kettle of boiling water. By this means the steam effectually shrinks the wool, and when the stocking is sent to the wash there will be no fear of the mended portion shrinking away or tearing the surrounding part.

When a carpet is soiled with blacklead, take a little fuller's earth, put it into a saucer, pour on to it a little cold water and a few drops of liquid ammonia. Mix the whole into a soft paste, rub it on the carpet, and let it thoroughly dry; then brush it on with a stiff brush. The blacklead will then all be removed.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON was perhaps the brightest example that he referred a chase once found a man-sized germ in his stomach.

He never attended a family reunion that lasted as long as two days that it didn't make him think deeply of the famous one that lasted fifty days in an ark when all the kin were surrounded by water and couldn't get away.

And the reflection always made his unfortunate wife invited to conjecture on the interpretation of the dream.

Ride on literally that when he received word that a man should go into his closet to pray he realized that he had been sadly remiss in his duties. When he said grace at the table, being a meek man, he had thanked his wife, and when he had retired he had been at his bedside.

"I will reform," he said one Sunday morning. "Hereafter I will go into my closet to pray. I will go now."

He opened the closet door and was in the act of falling on his knees when his eyes fell on the clothes racks hung with his wife's garments. There was dress after dress, so completely filling the closet that there was room for only one small kneeling space between Jacket.

He counted seventeen dresses, and his wife had told him that morning she had nothing to wear. There was the blue silk as good as new, which she said was fit for the raging, and a brocade and had worn only twice.

"There's that green serge, that black and white check, that brown diagonal, the gray suit she had bought two months ago; suit after suit, and every one as good as new. Good Lord, I wonder what ails."

The name of the Lord recalled him to his purpose, and he tried to get on his knees, but found there wasn't room because of the shoes, brown, white, black, kid, cloth, patent leather, high and low, that were scattered around him.

"Any one would think," Lysander John grumbled, "that my wife is a centipede. And she said yesterday she must get at least six more pairs before another week."

In his anger he swore at woman and her extravagance, and, knowing that resistance to his wife was futile, he began kicking the shoes out into the bedroom, throwing after each shoe a woman's garment in silk or wool. His wrath grew with the contents of the closet to such bounds that when he had cleared a space large enough for kneeling he no longer felt like it.

"She has cost me all I have on this earth," he groaned, "and now she has cost me the chance to get to heaven."

DOMESTIC OMENS

You should always mark a cross on the top of a cake or a pan of bread before you set it to rise. This will prevent the devil from jumping on it and crushing it down flat.

Never turn a bed on Friday, or the person who sleeps on it will have bad nights for a week.

Breakages always go in threes. So, if you should have broken one thing, you should immediately smash two more worthless ones—empty bottles, for something of that kind—so that the breaking may be over and done with.

Never put a pair of shoes on a table, for this leads to a quarrel.

If two people wash their hands in the same bowl they should spit in it and rinse it. Otherwise they will quarrel very quickly.

A black cat that comes into the house of its own free will brings good luck. If it spits at you you should cross it and throw some of it over your left shoulder.

Biting

"If you insist upon breaking our engagement, Miss Fickle, I shall make your letters public."

"You are welcome to do so, Mr. Scalper; there is nothing in them that I am ashamed of except the address on the envelopes."

Cassidy on Food Swindles

Mr. Cassidy today exposes the Pure Food and Drugs Act of 1906 and the methods by which food swindlers use it to defraud and cheat the public. His authorities are Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, Chief of the Federal Bureau of Chemistry, and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the former head of the bureau. Read how the delays in court enable the food swindler to reap his profits even while under condemnation by the government.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The Pure Food and Drugs Act of 1906 was originally intended to protect the public from dishonest food dealers. These swindlers have found ways of circumventing the law so successfully that the law is made an aid instead of a hindrance to their nefarious schemes.

"The words 'Guaranteed under the food and drugs act' on a label is news to many people believe, a guarantee that the contents of the package are pure," said Dr. Carl L. Alsberg before the American Food, Drug and Dairy officials at their Mobile meeting.

"These words still mean to many people that the Bureau of Chemistry has analyzed the product and declared it to be good.

"When you see the word 'Guaranteed' on a can of soup or a bottle of nerve tonic that doesn't mean that the Bureau of Chemistry has seen and analyzed it. The manufacturers put that word on to protect the retailer or jobber.

"All that the word means is that if the goods are found to be in violation of the food and drugs act the manufacturer can be prosecuted. This lets out the retailer or the jobber."

Months of Waiting.

Dr. Wiley told me the other day that when he was Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry and tried to prosecute dopers of food the cases would be hinded over to the Remsen board for its consideration.

After many months of waiting the Remsen board, composed of chemists, would hand down a decision for or against. If against the swindler Dr. Wiley was after this decision came only after months, during which time the swindler had been selling his goods in the same way.

But here is the high spot of the food and drugs act.

THE FINING OF A FOOD SWINDLER BY A COURT CAN NOT BE PUBLISHED BY THE GOVERNMENT UNTIL THIRTY DAYS AFTER JUDGMENT HAS BEEN REGISTERED. BY THAT TIME THE NEWS OF THE THIRTY DAYS OR SO FEW NEWSPAPERS WILL PUBLISH IT. THE SWINDLER THUS ESCAPES THE PUBLICITY OF HIS CRIME. THE ONLY RESULT HE FEARS.

Here is repeated section 1 of the act: "When a judgment of the court shall have been rendered there may be a publication of the findings of the court."

This publication may be made in the form of circulars, notices of labelling as the secretary of Agriculture may direct, NOT LESS THAN THIRTY DAYS AFTER JUDGMENT.

Delay in Prosecution.

March 20, 1911, the Gutlin Manufacturing Company, Kansas City, Mo., sold some flavored oil which was adulterated and misbranded. In fact the barrel contained only 50 per cent. of flaxseed oil, the remainder 50 per cent being foreign mineral oil.

January 8, 1912, judgment of condemnation and forfeiture was entered. March 2, 1913, W. M. Hays, acting Secretary of Agriculture, signs a circular with notice of judgment. This circular was issued May 31, 1913.

Employers of Massachusetts would now be entitled to that amount in dividends if their workmen's compensation insurance had all been in the Massachusetts Employees Insurance Association during the past year.

The stock liability companies and their agents retained this profit, and, of course, they want your renewal for the coming year.

Consider this: The Association has, with the approval of the Insurance Commissioner, just declared dividends to its general subscribers, on its first year's business, of from 28.16 per cent to 33.16 per cent.

The Association rates under its Merit System are lower than the new July first rates of the stock liability companies for Boots and Shoes, Textiles, Paper, Machine Shops, Wooden Boxes and many other industries.

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were much higher this morning, opening firmer and then working further upward. Trading was brisk in New York and early in the second hour Amalgamated was up 2, Steel 1⅜, Union Pacific 3, Canadian Pacific 2¾, Northern Pacific 1⅛, Southern Pacific 1, Reading 2¼, Interborough Valley 1⅜, American Can 1⅜ and Northern Ore 2.

Lesser gains were mostly fractional, but ruling were quite general. Boston & Maine was unchanged and New Haven a little lower. Both United Fruit and Boston Elevated had gained half a point. There was a better tone to copper.

Prices Higher in New York.

The tone of the New York market improved greatly over the week-end and prices went up at the outset. It was said that Wall Street is taking a more friendly view of the proposed currency legislation, a more correct understanding of the attitude of the Federal Reserve Board Commission towards Eastern needs was another favorable influence. Most of the early buying is said to have consisted of covering by heard room shorts.

The market was unsettled when trading began, which made it very sensitive to any buying. Nearly all standard issues moved upward.

Canadian Pacific opened 1⅞ higher, but profit taking developed which carried away ⅜ of the advance. Steel common began with a gain of ⅛, but at the end of half an hour the upturn had been increased to a point.

Among the other advances were: Lehigh Valley ½, Erie common ⅝, Erie preferred ⅝, St. Paul 1¾, C. & O. 1, American Tel. & Tel. ⅝, American Can ⅝, Amalgamated ⅝, Reading 1¼, Southern Pac. ¾ and Union Pacific 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore & Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ⅝ on selling pressure. American Car & Foundry lost ⅞, then recovered.

At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The Curb was steady. There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific was firm there.

I. C. C.'s Rate Statement.

After the stock market had slumped on Saturday because of the report that the Interstate Commerce Commission had denied the application of Eastern railroads for permission to increase freight rates 5 per cent., there came from Washington a brief and vague dispatch stating that the commission had rendered this action and would grant a hearing. What the commission said Saturday about its intentions is now given verbatim and as follows:

"Through misunderstanding, a draft of a proposed order for investigation in connection with proposed advances of rates in official classification territory has been served upon the carriers and given to the press today. This action has been rescinded and the commission in a few days will formally announce its conclusions and issue a record order."

What Has Been Ruled Upon.

What the commission ruled upon, it is said, "was regarding procedure rather than regarding the merits" of the petition of the roads for higher rates. The proposal of the commission to hold a hearing on its own accord, and to give both carriers and shippers a hearing, pleases President Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio, who is chairman of the railroad committee of presidents. He said:

"Personally, I am very much gratified by the action taken by the Commission, as I understand it. We have not yet received an official notice but did receive a message giving what I have no doubt is the substance of the Commission's order, and I am gratified by the action taken, because it affords the railroads and the public an opportunity to be heard on the question and I feel confident that the railroads will be able to furnish such evidence as will satisfy the Commission of their necessities. If they do, I believe the Commission will have no hesitancy in giving their approval to such increase in rates as under the circumstances may appear to them reasonable. From the standpoint of the railroads, therefore, I think the reply of the Commission, as to a substantial it, is entirely satisfactory."

The commission, it appears, denied the petition by the roads for a reopening of case 3400, but announced it is going to distribute an inquiry as to whether the existing rates yield an adequate return, and if not, what plan shall be adopted to increase such transportation charges. At least that is the railroad interpretation of the commission's decision.

To Tax $3,000 Bachelors.

It is reported the Senate sub-committee which is shaping the income tax, a part of the new tariff bill, has decided to put a premium upon matrimony. No bachelor who has an income of $3,000 a year can escape being taxed. The original proposition was not to tax incomes under $4,000. But according to the new plan every bachelor with $3,000 a year must contribute to government income as well as those other people who have that much revenue. There are exceptions in the case of certain married people.

For instance, if a man has a dependent wife, or a wife a dependent husband, and either of them is subject to the income tax provisions, an additional $1,000 of exemption is allowed.

There also is allowed an exemption of $500 each in the case of dependent children, with the proviso, however, that in no case shall this exemption exceed $1,000.

If both the husband and wife have incomes that bring them within the law none of these exceptions are to apply.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened weak with spot off 15s. standard futures 10s. lower.

A Butte dispatch says about 300 tons of ore a day are being shipped from the Butte-Daly property and that the earnings for last month amounted to $6,000. "With the increase in output," it is stated, "Consulting Engineer Cyrdon predicts that the earnings for the present month will run somewhere between $10,000 and $12,000."

Financial News in Brief.

It is reported that six British ships are being built at Belfast, Ireland, to bring beef to the United Kingdom from Argentina in order to fight the American Beef Trust in the British market.

May operating revenue of the Baltimore & Ohio increased $714,661, but there was a decrease of $47,381 in net. There was an increase of $741,842 in total operating expenses. For eleven months the net operating revenue increased $85,938. These figures do not include outside operations.

Rudolph Spreckles said in Paris that under the high tariff certain sugar plants paid 8% per cent. dividends and "it is not right that 100,000,000 of people should be taxed solely for the benefit of a few thousands."

I. W. W. Shortage Inquiry Pressed

Justice Braley of the Supreme Court today recommitted to Master Winfield S. Slocum the investigation into the shortage of $19,650.43 in the funds of the I. W. W. strike committee at Lawrence which secured contributions for the relief of the Lawrence strikers. Justice Braley wants more information regarding the shortage before he makes his final report. He has directed Master Slocum to report to him what portions of the relief funds were misused while money raised for other purposes, and to report what portions of the shortage are to be held for the four defendants—Joseph Bedard, William Yates, William Trautman and Joseph Shabeen.

SAY TIES CAUSED FATAL WRECK ON PENNSYLVANIA

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 23.—A rigid investigation will be made by the State authorities into the burning of railroad ties, directly after an accident which resulted in the death of one person and injuries to fifty more, as the result of a derailment of a Sunday excursion train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, near Caylerville.

The condition of the ties is thought to have been the cause of the derailment, and they were burned, it is said, by railroad employes, immediately after the wreck.

One woman, Mrs. Laura Barrett of No. 183 Main street, East Rochester, was so shaken up and shocked by the accident that she lost her reason. It was declared tonight that it was doubtful whether she would not be hopelessly insane because of her fright.

District Attorney Francis Cook of Livingston County arrived on the scene soon after the accident, and through Sheriff Donald G. Arand of Geneseo ordered that the ties be preserved as evidence.

The cause of the wreck is not yet clear. District Attorney Cook declared today that he had every reason to believe the ties were directly responsible. From other sources, the cause was ascribed as due to the breaking of a bolt attached to one of the trucks under the locomotive's tender.

HAVE A TRY FOR THE $1,000

Rush for Official Guides Continues

The popular picture puzzle contest, based on familiar proverbs, which has just finished its first successful week in the BOSTON AMERICAN, continues to attract the attention of thousands eager to carry off one of the big cash prizes offered for the nearest correct sets of solutions to the 75 puzzle pictures.

This competition offers these distinct advantages to those who are wise enough to enter:

In the first place, there are the one hundred and fifty-five cash prizes, ranging from the big cash prize of $1,000 in gold on down the list of $800, $500, $250, $150, down to the $5 cash prizes.

An important thing to remember about the prizes offered is that every prize is a cash prize and worthy of the utmost endeavor on the part of all contestants.

Then there is also additional value to the contest. Thinking out and becoming familiar with the sayings of the philosophers of the wise men and the wits of the world, has a fascination peculiarly its own. Every picture is just enough of a puzzle to bring the keenest pleasure to those trying to fit the picture to the proverb it represents.

All the contestant has to do is to fit the picture to the proverb, and if he or she has patience that should not be a difficult thing to do, with all the proverbs in black and white in the pages of the official guide.

Do not put off your chance to win a cash prize. If you have not already started solving the pictures, begin today. Just try today's picture and then tomorrow's, and you will speedily convince yourself that you have been missing a lot of mental pleasure, the existence of which you never suspected.

Back numbers of the puzzle pictures already published are now ready. All you have to do is send to the Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop sq., and they will be forwarded to you at the regular rates of the AMERICAN, that is, one cent for each daily picture and five cents for each Sunday picture.

BANKERS MEET OWEN IN FIGHT ON MONEY BILL.

By B. C. FORBES,

Business Editor of the American.

As a result of a secret conference between national bank representatives and Senator Owen, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, in the Waldorf Astoria, New York, an important change in the reserve regulations may be made in the Owen-Glass currency bill.

Bankers who entered the conference in a hostile, even defiant frame of mind, were slightly more disposed later to accept the whole principle of the administration's measure and to work for it rather than against it, although there are still quite a number of "reserved" cibilies."

The complaints that the new bill throws the entire banking machinery into the unrestrained control of politicians was very generally voiced today. Threats that many of the strongest banks would surrender their national charters and become State institutions were made, but Senator Owen, it was said, resented what he construed as an implied suspicion on the government and held out no hope of any recasting of this part of the bill.

The Bill as It Stands.

He also suggested that in the end the big national banks would no doubt find that they could not afford to give up the advantages of a national charter.

The bill as it now stands provides for the compulsory withdrawal of a period to be specified, of all country bank reserves from the reserve or central reserve cities. Of these withdrawals 40 per cent, the country banks, the bill stipulates, may carry in any form in their own vaults and the balance with the district Federal reserve bank while, to quote the text of the bill "from and after a date thirty-six months subsequent to the date set by the Secretary of the Treasury, the said remainder of the 15 per centum reserve required of country banks shall consist either of lawful money in its own vaults or of balance on deposit with the Federal reserve bank of its district, or both.

May Ask Amendment.

That would mean that country banks could send no part of their 15 per cent. reserve to New York, Chicago or other large cities to be employed in a way remunerative to the small banks. In other words, the present system of allowing part of the country reserve to be put to work to earn interest would be wholly abolished, the proceeds being paid for either the rural or the city banks.

An amendment will probably be suggested to the administration permitting the country banks to carry the third 5 per cent. of their reserve in reserve or central reserve cities, a proposal that would go far toward modifying bankers' opposition against the bill as drawn.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted.

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

But—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn, perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 300 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man,

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

(We quote the learned gentleman from memory, which is necessary when you write editorials on a railroad train.)

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

What Kind of a Government Is This?

A Government for Farmers or for Bankers?

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

In Germany the government lends money to farmers at 4 per cent. a year and less—the lending is done by banks, financial agents representing the government.

In France the government lends hundreds of millions to farmers and little business men, through regular agents, at 4 per cent. and even less.

In the United States the government lends money to the banks—charging them 2 per cent., or nothing at all. And the banks, out of one corner of their mouths, yell "Murder!" and "Anarchy!" and say that they cannot afford to pay 2 per cent. to the government.

And out of the other corner of the same mouth they tell the farmer that it is ridiculous for him to expect to borrow money for less than 8 per cent.—AND THE AVERAGE LOAN TO THE AMERICAN FARMER COSTS THE FARMER MORE THAN 8 PER CENT.

Germany, unlike this land, is not a republic blessed and blissful. It is a country ruled by an Emperor and King—who, in his turn, is pretty well ruled by the Social Democratic Party.

The German farmers, living under an Emperor, can get money at 4 per cent.

The American farmers, in a blessed republic, must pay 8 per cent., when their government lends money to the banks at 2 per cent.

So this is the question:

Is the government of the United States run by bankers for bankers, or by farmers for farmers—and which are more important to the national welfare—farmers or bankers?

Julius Caesar and Benjamin Franklin

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and a sceptre in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar Achieved Greatest Triumph by Amusing the Crowds

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about forty-six years before the birth of Christ.

About 1,745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in common sense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free, stabbed themselves.

Franklin Did Not Come of a Line of Illustrious Forefathers

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candle maker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1730, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumph.

BEAUTY

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

METHINKS there is no greater work in life
Than making beauty. Can the mind conceive
One little corner in celestial realms
Unbeautiful, or dull or commonplace?
Or picture ugly angels, lily clad?
Beauty and splendor, opulence and joy,
Are attributes of God, and his domain.
As so are worth and virtue. But why preach
Of virtue only to the sons of men,
Ignoring beauty, till they think it sin?
Why, if each dweller on this little globe
Could know the sacred meaning of that word
And understand its deep significance,
Men's thoughts would form in beauty, till their dreams
Of heaven would find expression in their lives,
However humble; they themselves would grow
Godlike, befitting such a fair estate.
Let us be done with what is only good—
Demanding here and now the beautiful—
Lest, with the mind and eye on earth untrained,
We shall be ill at ease when heaven is gained.

A DREAM WOMAN

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

SMALL and graceful and fair to see,
She sat in a nook alone with me.
How often, I wondered, had tears bedewed
Those big, brave eyes in her solitude,
She seemed like a vine that Destiny
Had set too far from a rugged tree,
And a longing to shield her slender form
Swept over my soul like a tropic storm;
A longing that out of my heart I threw
Lest she might sense it and misconstrue.

Big, brave eyes, each eye a star,
Mine to idolize from afar;
Only in dreams can I worship them.
God of this weird, bewildering scheme,
Why did you give us the will to dream?
Why did you place on Life's strange sea
The barren island of Cannot Be?
